The Coasters Literally Carry Everything before them.

FOURTEENTH STREET THE SCENE

Of a Carnival of Sport Seldom Equalled Anywhere, and Certainly Never South of Mason and Dixon's Line—Singular Scarcity of Accidents—The Street Thronged from the Top of the Hill to the Bottom.

Such a carnival of coasting was never seen in Wheeling as that of last night. Every steep street had its crowd, but Fourteenth and Twenty-second streets were the choice places. In the early part of the evening Twenty-second street was the scene of the most excitement, as there was no attempt to keep the coasters within bounds. On Fourteenth street the police did try for a few hours to keep anybody from being killed, but about half past 10 they concluded that the coasters came within scope of the old adage to the effect that the Lord takes care of fools, and let everything go.

There were a number of narrow escapes, but so far as heard of not a single serious accident. A dozen sleds were broken, a few skins skinned, and a head or two bumped, but considering the number of upsets and collisions the scarcity of casualties was really remarkable.

The most exciting mishap was at the corner of Fourteenth and Market streets, where a sleigh was passing when a sled ran just in front of it. The team tramped the sled to kindling wood, but nobody was hurt, and the owner of the sled took it very philosophically.

"Say, fellows," he called out, "is n't it about time to turn in for the night?"

A bystander said, "So long as nothing more serious than that happens it will be all right," and the owner of the sled said, "That's so."

Some of the sleds turned into Charline street and ran down as far as Sixteenth. Others ran against the curb there, and one in ever three upset. Besides being dumped in the snow, though, no harm was suffered by any of the people on them.

At Woods street, where the sleds started, from 100 to 500 people were gathered all the evening, and at every cross street similar crowds witnessed the sport. Fully 5,000 people were gathered along the track. After the order requiring all sleds to stop at Chapline street ceased to be enforced one or two of the sleds went clear to the Baltimore & Ohio freight depot, on Water street. From Woods street to that point is almost half a mile. From Woods to Chapline street is fully a quarter of a mile.

The track was perfect. The smooth snow made great speed possible and required little steering. An icy track would have been extremely dangerous.

The bob-sleds, numbering at least forty, ranged in length from eight to twenty-six feet. They were of all styles, but the coasters have found by experience that a sled too high or too narrow is neither safe nor pleasant to ride on, and the foot rest along the side is an absolute necessity for a complete bob.

One sled had a fire engine gone on the front of it. Another carried a hand organ, and several had bells of various kinds. One man carried a bugle, and sounded all sorts of military calls. Bicycle whistles were common, but the most popular alarm was the old cry, "Track! Track!"

Some of the sleds are very elaborate affairs, one having cost $25, it was said. A boy struck a popular chord, though, when he said: "I wouldn't ride on a bought sled." Most of them were the product of their owners' genius. Take two hand sleds, one longer than the other, the long one behind; fasten to it a stout, smooth board; then fix the other at the front end so that it will turn with the tiller, and you have a bob-sled. Two boys who own sleds of the right size and a third who has access to a board yard find little difficulty in completing the outfit. A fourth member may be taken into the syndicate on furnishing a gong, or a chair minus legs, to be nailed on the front for the tillerman's use.

Some of the sleds are guided by a pilot, who occupies an elevated seat at the rear, and works the tiller with ropes, but observation shows that this kind of rig is wrecked sooner, and by the survival of the fittest the perfect bob-sled is almost due.

Few little old-style sleds were out last night. They are "not in it" on the same track as the bob. Some of the bobs have names or mottos on them. One bears the legend, "Look a leetle bit Onit," and another "Good bye." The owner of the latter expected to pass all the other fellows, and he usually does. Perhaps the funniest of all the names is "Epiter." An INYLLA GENCER man asked about this, and learned that a hand sled called "Epiter" had been sawed off in the middle of an effort.

An effort was made to get the names of the owners of the largest bobs. One young fellow was asked who owned the sled he was on.

"I do know," said he; "who owns the street?" Apparently the coasters owned the street and the sleds in common.

Don't waste time, money and health trying every new medicine you may see advertised in the papers. If the cause of your trouble is in the blood, liver, stomach or kidneys, take Ayer's Sarsaparilla at once, and be sure of a cure. Take no other.

I. G. DILLON & CO.

Does any little girl in the city want a beautiful doll? You know you all do, every one of you. Well, here is a way to get it. Always ask the grocer for Tin Seal Bread, and when you have saved 100 of the little seals bring them to us at the Wheeling Bakery and we will fix you up nicely. We have given away about 1,000 dolls this winter, and nearly all of them to little girls. Sometimes a little boy gets one of them, but not often.

THE INTELLIGENCER'S VIEWS.

The Two New Portfolios to be Issued Today Are as Fine as Any.

To-day two of the INTELLIGENCER'S fine art portfolios will be out, No. 12 of the World's Fair Photos and No. 9 of the Sights and Scenes of the World. Both will be found fully equal in interest and artistic merit to any that have heretofore been issued, and there is not a picture in either one that is not worth the ten cents which the whole portfolio cost.

Part XII of the World's Fair Photos will contain the following pictures:

1. The United States Government Building.
2. The East India Building.
3. Interior of the East India Building.
4. The Prettiest Indian Building.
5. Building of the Ottoman Empire.
6. The little ship Illinois.
7. The Whaling Ship.
8. The Massachusetts Building.
9. The Wisconsin Building.

11. Quaint Exhibit of Javanese.
12. The Elephant's Hide.
13. The Great Siberian Mammoth.
14. Rescue of the Greely Survivors.
15. Panorama of the Greely Expedition.
16. The Great Yerkes Telescope.

Part IX of the Sights and Scenes of the World has the following fine views:

1. The Buckingham Palace, London.
2. Cambridge University.
3. Solovay Manor.
4. Welbeck Abbey, England.
5. City of Londonderry, Ireland.
6. Royal Palace, Berlin.
7. Habsburg Palace at Potsdam.

Do you save the little Tin Seals you find on your bread? When you take 100 of them to the Wheeling Bakery they will give you your choice from a great variety of magnificent landscape views and elegant ideal pictures. Twenty different views of the Yosemite Valley, the finest natural scenery in the world, in beautiful album form, or twenty scenes from the great cities of the globe, all for 100 Tin Seals.

At Salzburg, Austria, a man was kept prisoner in a cellar for fifteen years, during which he never saw a human face.

A SURGEON'S KNIFE

gives you a feeling of horror and dread. There is no longer necessary for its use in many diseases formerly regarded as incurable without cutting.

The Triumph of Conservative Surgery is well illustrated by the fact that RUPTURE or Hernia, is now rapidly cured without the knife and without pain. Gumey, chaffing trusses can be thrown away! They never cure but often induce inflammation, strangulation and death.

TUMORS and many others are now removed without the perils of cutting operations.

PILE TUMORS, however large, or other diseases of the lower bowel, are permanently cured without pain or resort to the knife.

STONE in the Bladder, no matter how large, is crushed, perfectly pulverized and passed out.

STRICTURE of Urinary Passage is also removed without cutting in hundreds of cases. For pamphlet, references and all particulars, send 10 cents (in stamps) to World's Dispensary Medical Association, 665 Main St., Buffalo, N. Y.
